I. INTRODUCTION

Monsanto Company ("Monsanto") alleges that the letter written by Marion Copley to Jess Rowland in 2013 ("Ms. Copley's letter") is inadmissible hearsay and that it would unfairly prejudice Monsanto. Not so. It is likely that Monsanto will introduce deposition or live testimony of Jess Rowland at trial. To rebut Mr. Rowland's credibility, Plaintiff should be allowed to introduce the letter. To that end, Ms. Copley's letter would not be used to prove that Roundup causes cancer, but to test the credibility of Mr. Rowland. Mr. Rowland's credibility is at issue, as pointed out in Judge Vince Chhabria's order. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. A. (Judge Vince Chhabria's Order).

At trial, it is likely that Monsanto will attempt to prove with Mr. Rowland's live or deposed testimony that it did not have any improper contacts with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA"). If Monsanto introduces such evidence, then Mr. Johnson will be unfairly prejudiced by the exclusion of Ms. Copley's letter because its contents goes directly to Mr. Rowland's credibility and Monsanto's influence over him and other members of the EPA. Monsanto's improper actions to mislead the EPA has always been one of the central claims in this case. Thus, Monsanto should not be allowed to introduce Mr. Rowland's testimony via live or deposed while at the same time seeking to exclude relevant credibility evidence against Mr. Rowland.

Furthermore, Ms. Copley's letter is authenticated by circumstantial evidence and Mr. Rowland's own deposition testimony. The personal nature of the letter, revealing personal and workplace disputes between Ms. Copley and Mr. Rowland, along with Mr. Rowland's testimony during deposition that he and Ms. Copley did have disputes, substantiates that the letter is what it purports to be. Although, Mr. Rowland's testimony was that he never received the letter. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. B. (Rowland Deposition) at 109:11-16. The letter was addressed to him, and made note of personal information, including allegations of collusion, which were investigated by the Office of Inspector General. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. C. (Inspector General Letter)(May 31, 2017). Thus, the jury should decide what weight they will give to the letter in determining Mr. Rowland's credibility.

This Court should resist Monsanto's attempt to suppress relevant evidence concerning one of the central issues in this case: Monsanto's attempts to mislead the EPA.

II. ARGUMENT

A). Ms. Copley's Letter Is Relevant Evidence Of Mr. Rowland's Credibility

"Relevant evidence" means evidence, including evidence relevant to the credibility of a witness or hearsay declarant, having any tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action. See, Cal. Evid. Code § 210; People v. Pearson, 56 Cal. 4th 393, 438 (2013); People v. Wheeler, 4 Cal. 4th 284, 295 (1992). No evidence is admissible except relevant evidence. Cal. Evid. Code § 350 (West). A court "has no discretion to admit irrelevant evidence." See, People v. Babbitt, 45 Cal. 3d 660, 681 (1988), as modified on denial of reh'g (Aug. 25, 1988). At trial, the "jury may consider in determining the credibility of a witness any matter that has any tendency in reason to prove or disprove the truthfulness of his testimony." Cal. Evid. Code § 780. In all but a few exceptions, none which apply here, doubts about the credibility of the in-court witness should be left for the jury. People v. Hovarter, 189 P.3d 300, 311 (Cal. 2008).

At trial, it is likely that Monsanto will seek to introduce deposition or live testimony of Jess Rowland in an attempt to show that it did not mislead the EPA. In order to rebut such testimony, Plaintiff intends to question Mr. Rowland's credibility by introducing the letter written by Ms. Copley. Ms. Copley's letter clearly alleges that members of the EPA had improper and illegal contacts with Monsanto. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. D. (Ms. Marion Copley's Letter). That Mr. Rowland knew about these contacts and did nothing. Id. And that Mr. Rowland also had improper and illegal contacts with Monsanto. Id. It is true that Mr. Copley's letter does imply that Monsanto's glyphosate-based products cause cancer, but Plaintiff would not seek to use the letter to prove as much, it would be used to test the credibility of Mr. Rowland.

In fact, Mr. Rowland's credibility has already come into question. In Judge Vince Chhabria's order, the judge references the "somewhat evasive" nature of Mr. Rowland's answers during deposition. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. A. (Judge Vince Chhabria's Order).

During Mr. Rowland's deposition, Mr. Rowland was asked if he received Ms. Copley's letter. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. B. (Rowland Deposition) at 109:11-16. Mr. Rowland stated that he had not. Id. However, the letter was addressed to him and referenced personal issues that only Ms. Copley and Mr. Rowland would have known about. Thus, there is a question as to the truth of Mr. Rowland's statements at deposition and potential statements at trial.

As such, the jury should decide if Mr. Rowland received the letter and use it to weigh against his credibility.

Furthermore, to allow Monsanto to exclude such relevant evidence of Mr. Rowland's credibility would unduly prejudice Mr. Johnson. If the Court grants Monsanto's motion, it would effectively prevent Mr. Johnson from presenting to the jury evidence questioning the credibility of the witness.

Excluding such relevant and probative evidence from the jury is not permitted. People v. Gonzalez, 135 P.3d 649, 654 (Cal. 2006). Therefore, the Court should deny Monsanto's Motion in limine No. 8.

B.) Ms. Copley's Letter Is Authenticated By Circumstantial Evidence and Mr. Rowland's Deposition Testimony

Authentication can be established by any one of a variety of means. Interinsurance Exch. v. Velji, 118 Cal. Rptr. 596 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 1975). There is no strict requirement as to how a party authenticates a writing. Ramos v. Westlake Services LLC, 195 Cal. Rptr. 3d 34, 41 (Cal. App. 1st Dist. 2015). The proponent need only introduce, (a) "evidence sufficient to sustain a finding that it is the writing that the proponent of the evidence claims it is or (b) the establishment of such facts by any other means provided by law." Cal. Evid. Code § 1400. Evidence showing that a document is what it claims it is may be established by circumstantial evidence. People v. Valdez, 135 Cal. Rptr. 3d 628, 635 (Cal. App. 4th Dist. 2011). Likewise, the authenticity of a document "may be established by the contents of the writing." Daniel v. Wayans, 213 Cal. Rptr. 3d 865, 887 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 2017). And "testimony of a subscribing witness is not required to authenticate a writing." Cal. Evid. Code Ann. § 1411; Stevens v. Irwin, 12 Cal. 306, 306 (1859)("A subscribing witness to a written instrument, if within the jurisdiction of the Court, must be produced, or some sufficient reason given for his absence.")

If there are conflicting inferences that can be drawn regarding authenticity, those go "to the document's weight as evidence, not its admissibility." Daniel v. Wayans, 213 Cal. Rptr. 3d 865, 888 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 2017).

Ms. Copley's letter authenticates itself. The contents of Ms. Copley's letter is personal in nature. Only Ms. Copley or someone else that worked with Mr. Rowland would know that Mr. Rowland has a degree from Nebraska in 1971 and that she and he argued many times on the Cancer Assessment Review Committee (CARC). Mr. Rowland's own testimony affirms the contents of the letter and the personal information contained. Mr. Rowland testified that he and Ms. Copley had issues. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. B. (Rowland Deposition) at 116:8-14. His testimony affirms the personal issues raised in the letter and authenticates its contents.

Likewise, Ms. Copley's collusion allegation in the letter against Mr. Rowland authenticates the letter. Ms. Copley's letter states that Mr. Rowland "intimidated staff on CARC and changed HIARC and HASPOC final reports to favor industry." See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. D. (Ms. Marion Copley's Letter). While Mr. Rowland did not admit to colluding with Monsanto at his deposition. Mr. Rowland did tell a Monsanto employee that "if I can kill this I should get a medal" speaking in reference to the glyphosate report on the carcinogenicity of glyphosate. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. E. (Email Chain). In fact, the Inspector General investigated Mr. Rowland for collusion between himself and Monsanto for, in part, leaking an incomplete assessment of glyphosate. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. F. (News clipping). Within days of the leak, Mr. Rowland was placed on administrative leave.

Furthermore, Ms. Copley's letter was written years before the Inspector General's investigation or public allegations of collusion. See Declaration of Curtis Hoke, Ex. D. (Ms.

Marion Copley's Letter). High profile news articles and public interest did not begin to take interest in Glyphosate-based products until after IARC's pronouncement in 2015. Only Ms. Copley would have been privy to Mr. Rowland's collusion with Monsanto in 2013.

The personal information, detailed facts, time written, and substantiated allegations against Mr. Rowland authenticates Ms. Copley's letter as a document that only Ms. Copley could have drafted.

C.) Ms. Copley's Letter Is Relevant To Mr. Rowland's Credibility And It Is Not Unduly Prejudicial To Monsanto

"In general, evidence is substantially more prejudicial than probative if it poses an intolerable risk to the fairness of the proceedings or the reliability of the outcome." Hernandez v. County of Los Angeles, 173 Cal. Rptr. 3d 226, 237 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 2014)(emphasis added).

Here, it seems that Monsanto has confused what is prejudicial evidence to its defense with the meaning of unduly prejudicial evidence. However, damaging evidence is not synonymous with unduly prejudicial evidence. Monsanto should not be allowed to escape the former.

Evidence used to rebut Monsanto's assertions that it did not have improper contacts with the EPA is relevant and it is indeed a central issue in this case. Indeed this evidence will be prejudicial to Monsanto, but it is not an intolerable risk to the fairness of the trial.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the above stated reasons, Plaintiff respectfully requests that this honorable Court DENY Monsanto's Motion in limine No. 8.
