Three Generations of International Advocates to Speak at Monsanto Shareholder Meeting

Leaders from Canada, Wisconsin & Hawaii to Highlight Dangers of GMOs & Pesticides

Creve Coeur, MO - Three generations of women will speak out for the health of current and future generations at the annual Monsanto shareholder meeting.

WHO:

- Rachel Parent, teenager and founder of Kids Right To Know from Canada representing a Moms Across America contact.
- Anne Temple, mother and leader from Moms Across America, representing John Harrington of Harrington Investments.
- Beth Savitt, grandmother and President of the Shaka Movement of Hawaii, representing As You Sow.

WHAT: the attendance of three generations of women holding Monsanto accountable as a symbol of the worldwide movement opposed to GMOs and pesticides

WHEN: Friday, January 29, 2016 at 1:30pm CST

WHERE: Monsanto Headquarters, Creve Coeur, MO

In the past year, the World Health Organization has deemed glyphosate, Monsanto's main profit producing herbicide, a probable carcinogen. Monsanto's Roundup sales dropped 34% in 2015 and they are cutting 16% of their workforce. The women, who will be presenting resolutions on behalf of John Harrington of Harrington Investments and the non-profit As You Sow, intend to remind Monsanto that by choosing a new direction, away from genetic engineering and toxic chemicals, they can save jobs, protect their profits, the health of citizens and the planet.

You can listen to the Monsanto shareholder meeting live on the Monsanto website. The meeting is at 1:30pm January 29, 2016. Follow up report and links to the recording will be found at www.momsacrossamerica.org and www.harringtoninvestments.com

All – I've attached a backgrounder on Rachel that we've pulled together.

Conversation around Parent's expected visit has mainly been her pushing the crowdfunding page to other activists on Twitter – it remains small at this time. She has raised $245 so far on the crowdfunding page but given the effort and planning it is likely she already has funding - it could be from her father's natural foods business (see attached for more).

Reinforces what we discussed this morning with CG and Security. These people believe they will be able to attend the meeting simply by another shareowner giving them permission "to borrow" their shares. As we discussed, we plan to reinforce and stick to our rules but we do need to be prepared for some disturbances in the lobby area once these people get the message that they are not allowed in the meeting.

Looks like Rachel Parent from Canada will be joining us for the Annual Meeting and will be having a rally outside:

<https://www.generosity.com/fundraising/send-rachel-parent-to-monsanto-shareholder-meeting>

She says that she is raising money to travel, but other comments indicate that she will likely be here regardless of this fundraising campaign (highlights below).

We'll pull together a backgrounder.

This is Rachel Parent. She's the founder of an organization called Kids Right to Know. At the age of 16, Rachel is already an accomplished public speaker and debater.

Rachel thinks kids—and everyone, actually—have the right to know what they're eating. If food contains GMO's (or "genetically modified organisms"), Rachel thinks it should say so on the label. That way, people can decide whether they want to buy it or not.

Monsanto Corporation is the world's largest supplier of GMOs. Monsanto has fought against labeling laws. Rachel has some questions for Monsanto. In fact, lots of questions.

Monsanto's annual shareholder meeting will be held on January 29 in St. Louis, Missouri. Rachel is planning to attend. She holds the proxy of a Monsanto shareholder who can't attend herself. All Rachel needs is the airplane fare from Toronto to St. Louis, and the accommodation expenses for staying there.

While in St. Louis, Rachel will join Anne Temple, an activist with Moms Across America—another organization that's concerned about how to feed kids the healthiest possible foods. Together, they'll put the hard questions to Monsanto.

They'll also hold a public rally to inform people about GMOs and why the average person should want to know whether their food is genetically modified or not.

We'd like to raise $3,900 to cover Rachel's expenses for this event. If there's money left over, it will go to Kids Right to Know Community Association, to continue the work of informing the public.

Please help send Rachel to St. Louis with your donation of $10, $25, $50 or more. Please donate, then share this video with your friends and family. Share it with everyone who's concerned about GMOs and healthful food.

I've created this crowdfunding site because I agree with Rachel's concerns. I try to avoid eating GMO foods because many of them contain residues from Monsanto's herbicide product Roundup. Roundup contains glyphosate salts and esters, and I'm suspicious that these chemicals are damaging to human health.

I've included as an attachment as well.

Good call on the one-pager, Sara. If Moms Across America really did a release on this, it's utterly despicable. And if she tries to bring that up on Friday, I think we have to be really blunt Maybe something like this? ... "The situation in Flint is a tragedy – and let's be very clear: It has nothing to do with glyphosate or agriculture. The people of Flint are looking for real information about health and safety, and the myths you are spreading are an unfortunate distraction from the critical issues and the facts. Next question, please.”

Thoughts?

Good grief.

All – Being mindful that all the binders are printed at this point, I think we may want to consider a separate one-pager for any last minute topics we feel we need to be prepared for this week. That way they can just add it to their binders rather than us having to keep updating the messaging guide. Thoughts?

We may want to consider adding some language around the Flint Water Crisis as well – Tamar Haspel has indicated on Twitter 2 hours ago that she received a press release from Moms Across America (Zen) blaming the crisis on glyphosate. We are looking for the release now, but it doesn’t appear to be readily available.

All,

I've attached updated and formatted backgrounders for the Annual Meeting. These include Honeycutt, Savitt, Lindsley, Temple, and Baden-Mayer and are formatted into one document that is internally hyperlinked for digital consumption and if/when printed will neatly form individual backgrounders. These include recent claims & activities, background information, and video links where possible.

Additionally I have video content that can be viewed off-line for Honeycutt, Savitt, Lindsley, and Baden-Mayer that will be included along with the backgrounder document on flash drives when they arrive (likely Monday). These are all in MP4 format and should be playable on any device.
