Yes. I'll send the latest for legal review and get it posted asap. We'll start with it being posted inconspicuously, but available so people can be directed to it. That way if the Smith piece stays under the radar we haven't prompted it so as to help his cause. If it starts to get traction, we can reposition.

Thanks to all for input/help and a quick turnaround. T

Tom,

Are you on board to post this to the website?

See the link in the revised version- we have a whole PAGE of links on the website.

I would note that this is IMPOSSIBLE FOR ANY HUMAN BEING TO ACTUALLY FIND..... I happen know that by searching the site for glyphosate safety I can get to the page- but NAVIGATING TO IT APPEARS TO BE IMPOSSIBLE.

THIS is what needs to be fixed right away..... the new document will come.....

David Saltmiras needs to be included in the broader discussion.

This looks really good. Who is responsible for getting a more current glyphosate safety piece posted on Monsanto's website?

What is the next step from here and who takes it?

Gary,

Is Dan out of the office? If not, please touch base with him. I would appreciate it if he or you take the lead on this urgent response. Please advise.

Tom- yes, I already forwarded to Dan. We should also engage Bruce Chassy, if available, to post a response to AgBioView and then Academics Review. I can share our statement via Chatter to spread the information.

I would like to post a "we are aware of" statement on .com asap, and in summary debunk any new allegations and reaffirm the history of safe use positioning for glyphosate. Key is getting this posted asap, ideally before Smith's piece hits Huff Po.

Eric, can your team take the lead on technical content? What I envision is a couple of paragraphs at most that state conclusions, along the lines of our such postings. Thanks, T.

Attached is the latest bog post from anti-GM/Monsanto activist Jeffrey Smith. It "reveals the devastating and unprecedented impact that Monsanto's Roundup herbicide is having on the health of our soil, plants, animals, and human population. On top of this perfect storm, the USDA now wants to approve Roundup Ready alfalfa, which will exacerbate this calamity.”

Jeffrey has stated that this will be posted to Huffington Post soon – possibly this week.
